There are al ready about 450 inhabitants settled upon the banks of the Aroustonk, and they are chiefly citizens who have emigrated from other portions of Maine. Madawasks is populated by the da. scendants of the ancient Acadians, who were driven from their homes in Nova Scotia in 1770. They are generally unacquainted with the Enge lish language, but speak a peculiar dialect of the French language. They know but little of the geography or politics of the country, and desire to live unmainsted by the dissentions of the two countries who claim jurisdiction ever them Their habits are simple and frugal, and they live chieffy by hunting, fishing, and impaine at bear ver and otter. The new road now in progress from the great military road to the Aroustook, and fanishence to Madawaska, will, when completed; afford ready access to these valuable re-

> Gen Wool's and Maj Graham's Reports We confess we were not sensible of half our obligations to the prudent and energetic policy of Gov. Kent, until we saw the communication of the Secretary of War, containing Gen, Wool's and Maj Graham's Reports of their recominissance last summer, in answer to the resulution of the Senale

> Our only surprise is that these Reports were not completed and made fearlier, so as to have been communicated to the Governmentof this State, and by the Corernor, with the rest of the documents on the subject, to the Legislature. To those documents these Reports undoubtedly form a material and valuable Appendix They will, however coming in this shape, stand dinne chance ol-a geiteral publication, which some of the most important direct communications from Gos Kent have not had; and in this way a large class of our newspaper read. rs will have an opportunity of seeing what they hardly might in any other.

I proceed now to the other branch of the rep. es niation, which was used to show off more hideously nits alleved separation from the republican party, vix. my having been made by the republican party all that I am and being indebted'to them, &c This requires me to take a ib. trospective view of my relations with the purity in whose name the peculiar vengeance due to ingratitude has been onepairingly invoked upon my head. In these remaiscences I will state. nothing which is not well known to the neutriof this State, or for which I am not propared with anfindisputable souther. If again, in these to which are less agreeable than I could wish to are of my republican friends let them alfribute to their own combined mistariune, and disgrace of having for their bad presses so reckless. ly nase in their assaults and regardless of truth, self in a way to leave no opening for luit e cavil Til 1527, agamuthe pointed renomed order of certain, recognized tenders of the republican par ly, and when nothing of good beyond the cattle of them-Officials was known to the generality of politicians in Maine of Gen Jackson, I persuaded Gen Todd, (then proprietor) to allow the columns of the Eastern Argus to be opened to he support of Gen Jackson for the Presidency. The party then callying around the Argus was in an apparently hopeless minority in the State. But I could enty know the street as rak rebabfican party, and in politics I could know myself only as a REPUBLICAN; and repardless of all refetence to both minorities and majorities, looking only to differences in the principles of contending parties, every impulse associated me with the then Argus party. From that period onward, until within the last Iwo years, I deoled my time, money, tal nt, nearth, reputation, every thing, in fact, to sustain that paper as the rallying point of republicanism and the oreast of the reputitions parcy. And les me say; that but for my devotion to it, that paper must have sunk, more than once, beneath the pressure of the times, and with it must have sunk, to no montaid table extent, the inflature and hapes of the republican party of Maine With all the protessed zeal of others engaged in the same cause. none were ready, or willing, it able, to sustain the publisher as-circumstances and his condition shadutely required. Most especially during the panie of 1834, was the Argus most important to the di-nocratic cause: and yet, neither natriot isin, or love of principle, or of party, were sufficient to induce those devoted to that course, to lend a helping-liand to that publisher to the exlent of his necessities, or to one tenth of the extent that I did . It is not a discredit to him to have known the strate to which he was driven at that juncture, as well as at others - The mass men immediately honored by that mass, with public stations did know the schole, yet extend or the support of his paper. He was left to buffet the storm that was around win single ander, as it were, or to sink beneath it Noth ng con montain a more grapulo, or authoritic descript on of the scenes through which the Aroild's own current details of his situation in it Under date of January 31, 1884, he thus wrote

Not only at this crisis did I put all my means and influence my money and credit, to the support of that establishment, but I had for months and even years been doing so, regardless of individual hazard, as the next letter I shall quote will indicate very clearly to the world.

Under date of Feb 15, 1834, Gen Todd, proprietor and publisher of the Argus, wrote me as " It is true that "" & Co. have failed, as intimated to you last evening. We are all going to h ; and I only write to intimate to you, that I wish you to take care of your property, so that if I should be compelled to stop payment you may secure yourself in season. This is no joke It would puzzle me confoundedly to raise $100

Instead, linwever, of despairing, and or yielding the Argus and its proprietor a triumph to the exulting enemies of the Republican party, and suffering that party to be overwhelmed with mortification and prejudice by the failure and doanfall of the meat and at, honored, and influential press. at a cross-like that, I wrote my then partner in business.
